Announcement

(Rio de Janeiro, September 30, 2003). PETRÓLEO BRASILEIRO S/A - PETROBRAS, [Bovespa: PETR3/PETR4, NYSE: PBR/PBRA, Latibex: XPBR/XPBRA], a Brazilian international energy company, in order to dispel doubts regarding possible losses arising from frauds in connection with securities issued by the Company during the 50s, wishes to state that:

- The securities mentioned above are Bearer Bonds which were introduced by art. 15 of Law no. 2.004/53, of October 3, 1953, and were based on the annual compulsory contribution to which vehicle owners were subject from 1954 to 1957;
- These securities paid half yearly interest and could have been redeemed or converted into preferred shares issued by PETROBRAS, at the end of 20 years - during the 1970s - if the requirements of the Corporation Law and art. 18 of Law no. 2.004/53 were satisfied by the bond holders;
- After 20 (twenty) years, bondholders who did not demand redemption or conversion in due time could no longer do so, as they had not exercised this right within the time limit laid down by law and in accordance with the conditions stated on the back of the bonds themselves;
- Given that such bonds are not SHARES, but may be converted into shares, provided that redemption or conversion was demanded, at the appropriate time, the Presidential Commission for the Defense of Citizens' Rights (CODIC) in a decision dated August 19, 1988, handed down in case number 3.337-5/87, took the view that no rights had been violated, as they were statute barred and in view of the provisions of art. 18 of Law number 2.004/53, which laid down the conditions to be satisfied by each person requesting redemption or conversion.

It should be emphasized that the Company has suffered no loss from the fraudulent attempt to redeem these securities.
