Products Equity Linked Notes Equity Linked Notes (ELNs) allow clients to customize return to suit their investment needs. Traditional equity investments provide full exposure to the market, whether the performance is positive or negative. ELNs provide clients with an alternative to traditional equities that can offer an enhanced return if the underlying equity asset rises, and varying levels of protection if the market falls. ELNs can be linked to a variety of underlying assets, including indices, single stocks, portfolios of shares and industry sectors, and can be expanded to include commodities and currencies. Risks ELNs may be suited for clients who: Want access to products that can be customized to reflect their return preferences Want to limit market exposure to match their level of risk tolerance Require growth or income in their portfolio Prefer a medium term investment typically of 3 - 10 tailored exposure to equity markets. For markets with expected growth, clients may consider notes that provide an accelerated or boosted return. These products provide enhanced participation in the positive performance of a selected equity market For investors that require income, notes that pay fixed or conditional coupons at above-market rates may be appropriate. Risk Tolerance ELNs are created to accommodate a variety of risk tolerance levels. Notes can be designed to provide partial or conditional downside exposure while still offering upside return in positive markets. Flexible a short time frame, typically a few days. Clients can choose to participate in ELNs when it best suits their investment Resour ces 0. Choos ing the Upside Return - Growth Notes Growth not es are designed to enhance returns when market performance is positive. Booster Notes and Enhanced Return Notes are two types of GrowthnotQs. A Booster NoteA Booster Note will provide a minimum return at maturity if the performance in the underlying equity asset at maturity is positive but less than the stated Booster Percentage. For any positive performance greater than the Booster Percent age, the investor will typically participate in the full appreciation of the underlying equity asset at maturity. For any negative performance in the underlying equity asset, the investor will receive a return equal to the underlying equity asset's price return at maturity, unless the note includes limits on downside exposure. Employing a Booster strategy may be appropriate in the following scenarios. An Investor Is moderately bullish: As an example, a note that offers a 50% booster for any return in the underlying equity asset between 0 - 50%, will provide the investor with a 50% payout at maturity even if the performance of the underlying equity asset is 0.01%. This is displayed visually in the graph below. An Investor is bullish but wants to maximize return In the event that equity market performance is modest: If the underlying equity asset generates significantly positive returns, the investor participates in these returns but also receives the booster return during modest market performance. Upside Participation Payment at

It is also worth highlighting that investors do not receive any additional return based on the performance of the underlying equity asset at maturity over and above the coupon payments paid throughout the term of the note. All coupons and payments at maturity are subject to the issuer's credit and are therefore dependent on the Issuer's ability to pay at the time. investor from a stated decline in the performance of the underlying equity asset at maturity. For example, a note with a 30% buffer limits the investor's exposure to the first 30% drop in the underlying equity asset at maturity. If the underlying equity asset were to suffer a loss beyond 30%, the investor would only participate in the drop beyond 30%, e.g. for a drop of 50% in the underlying equity asset, the investor would incur a loss reflecting 20% of the decline. Buffer strategies, when combined with boosters or enhanced return features, offer investors the ability to enhance returns while providing insulation from the initial loss of a stated amount. Considerations: While this strategy manages the risk of a market fall, the benefits of the buffer are only realized at maturity. The investor is exposed to any loss on the underlying equity asset beyond the buffer. All payments at maturity are subject to the issuer's credit and are therefore dependent on the issuer's ability to pay at the time. Barrier: Barriers offer protection that is conditional on the performance of the underlying equity asset on the maturity date. For example, if a note includes a 30% barrier at maturity, as long as the underlying equity asset does not drop by 30% or more at maturity, investors will receive back their original investment. If the underlying equity asset were to drop by 30% or more, investors would fully participate in the drop and lose principal in line with the drop in the underlying equity asset. This is unlike unbuffered strategies, where investors would only participate in the incremental drop beyond 30%.

ELNs - RBC Structured FX - C i Secure I <https://www.rbcusnotes.com/beta/LearningCentre/ELNs>. IRBC Capital Markets Home Current Offerings Existing Products Product Summaries Resources 0. Important Additional Risk considerations An investment in ELNs involves significant risks. These risks are explained in more detail in the applicable offering documents for a specific offering. Before investing in an ELN, investors should carefully read the relevant offering documents to ensure they understand all of the potential risks. Some general risk considerations for ELNs include, but are not limited to the following: ELNs are unsecured debt obligations of the relevant issuer. Investors are dependent on the ability of the issuer to pay all amounts due on the notes, and therefore, investors are subject to the relevant issuer's credit risk and to changes in the market's view of the creditworthiness of the relevant issuer. Depending on the structure, investors in an ELN could lose some or their entire principal if there is a decline in the underlying equity asset. Even for structures that offer limited downside exposure, the return of principal will depend on the relevant issuer's ability to pay its obligations at the relevant time. Some structures pay a variable or contingent coupon based on the performance of the underlying equity asset. This coupon may fluctuate over time and potentially be zero for some or all of the ELN's term. In some structures, the coupon may be the only return an investor will be entitled to for the ELN. For structures that are subject to redemption prior to maturity, if the ELNs are called before maturity, an investor will not receive any further coupons and may not be able to reinvest the proceeds from the call in an investment with a comparable return had the ELNs not been called. ELNs are typically sold at par and include fees and costs such as commissions, hedging costs and projected profits of the relevant issuer or its affiliates. Therefore, the estimated initial value of an ELN at the pricing date will be less than the issue price investors pay for the ELN. The offering documents of an ELN will typically include the issuer's initial estimated value of the ELN. This estimated value does not represent the future value of the ELN. ELNs will not be listed on any securities exchange. While the relevant issuer or its affiliate will generally endeavor to maintain a secondary market, they are not obligated to do so. The issuer or its affiliate may cease any market-making activities at any time. Even if a secondary market for the ELNs develops, it may not provide significant liquidity or trade at prices advantageous to the investor. The price at which an investor may be able to sell ELNs prior to maturity, if at all, may be at a substantial discount from the principal amount of the ELNs, even in cases where the closing price of the underlying equity asset has appreciated since the trade date. In addition, investors will not receive the benefit of any contingent repayment of principal if they sell ELNs before the maturity date. The potential returns described in the relevant offering documents assume the ELNs, which are not designed to be short-term trading instruments, are held to maturity. The return on ELNs may be lower than the return an investor could earn on other investments during the same term. Even if the return on an ELN is positive, it may be less than the return an investor could earn if it bought a conventional debt security of the relevant issuer. Investing in ELNs is not the same as owning the underlying equity asset (or any security or other component including in the underlying equity asset) directly. For instance, investors usually will not receive or be entitled to receive any dividend payments or other distributions on the underlying equity asset. Investors will also not have any voting rights or any other rights that a holder of the underlying equity asset may have. The activities of the relevant issuer or its affiliates may conflict with an investor's interests and may adversely affect the value of the ELNs. Many economic and market factors will influence the value of the ELNs, including but not limited to, interest and yield rates in the market, time to maturity of the ELNs, expected volatility of the underlying equity asset, and economic, financial, political, regulatory or judicial events. While the offering documents will typically contain a summary of the expected U.S. federal income tax consequences of an investment in the ELNs, significant aspects of the tax treatment of the ELNs may be complex and uncertain. Prospective investors should consult with their tax advisor before investing in any ELN to determine the effects based on their individual circumstances.

secondary market, if any, prior to maturity may be at a substantial discount from the investor's initial investment. Typically, the market value of an ELN will only fully reflect the return formula at or close to maturity. Prior to maturity, a variety of factors may cause the market value of an ELN to be less than the principal amount, or less than the amount that may be expected to be paid at maturity. Prior to investing, potential investors should review the relevant offering documents for details specific to the ELN offering. How It Works choosing an Equity Linked Note ELNs are created based on the investment preferences of clients. Investors can choose from notes with a growth or income focus, based on their personal requirements.
