Employee Q&A

1. What was announced today?

Illumina announced that our Board of Directors rejected Roche's revised offer to acquire us for $51.00 per share. This announcement was made after the Board thoroughly reviewed the offer, together with its financial and legal advisors, and made a unanimous determination that Roche's revised offer dramatically undervalues Illumina and does not reflect our singular position in an industry poised for extraordinary growth.

2. Why did the Board reject Roche's offer again?

The Board believes that Roche's revised offer dramatically undervalues Illumina and does not reflect our singular position in an industry poised for extraordinary growth.

The Board's filed response, along with the related press release, can be found on Illumina's website. We urge you to read them for more information.

3. What are you saying today that is different from your previously stated reasons for rejecting the offer?

The core analysis has not changed. The offer dramatically undervalues Illumina and does not reflect our singular position characterized by a track record of innovation and outperformance in an industry poised for extraordinary growth.

4. How does this affect me?

You can expect business as usual at Illumina. We must remain fully focused on executing as we always have.

5. What happens next?

It has been, and will be continue to be, business as usual at Illumina. We must remain fully focused on executing as we always have.

6. So have you put the Company up for sale?

We were not and are not seeking a sale. The offer and subsequent revision was unsolicited. However, the Board thoroughly reviewed the offer in accordance with its fiduciary duties and in consultation with independent financial and legal advisors.

Our Board and management team are enthusiastic about our future opportunities and remain committed to executing our business strategy, and building near and long-term value for all of our stockholders.

7. It seems like you're only focused on stockholders. Does that mean that the impact on employees is a secondary concern?

We have a legal obligation as a public company to do what's in the best interests of our stockholders but, at the same time, we recognize that our success as a company is very much based on the contributions made by our employees. Our culture is based on trying to do the right thing by all of our constituents, including stockholders, customers, suppliers, partners, employees, and of course the researchers, healthcare providers and patients who depend on our products and services.

8. Is there any chance we will do a deal with Roche?

I can't speculate. Our Board clearly has tremendous confidence in the value we are creating as an independent company.

9. Are we having financial problems?

Absolutely not. In fact, it's quite the opposite: Illumina is growing and financially healthy, which is something Roche itself has recognized.

10. Is it likely that Roche will just acquire us anyway through a hostile deal?

I can't speculate. Our Board has recommended that stockholders not tender their shares, based on its conclusion that Roche's offer is inadequate from a financial point of view and given the significant potential of our Company is not in the best interests of our stockholders.

We also have corporate defenses, such as our stockholder rights plan, that give our Board the tools it needs to protect value for our stockholders.

11. Roche said that it would retain Illumina's management team and employees, as well as its headquarters in San Diego. Under these circumstances, doesn't it seem like Roche would be a good fit for us?

Roche has correctly observed that we have an outstanding workforce and we couldn't agree with that more. But a merger of the companies is a purely hypothetical event. The bottom line is that Roche's offer dramatically undervalues Illumina and we intend to vigorously resist Roche's opportunistic attempt to acquire the Company on that basis.

12. Will there be more layoffs if we are acquired by Roche? Will my benefits change?

It's far too hypothetical to speculate.

13. How will this affect my ability to serve our customers?

It won't. The best thing we can do now is to remain fully focused on innovating and executing as we always have.

14. What should I tell customers?

Customers should know that we do not expect this situation to impact them. We remain fully committed to meeting and exceeding their needs and expectations.

15. What should we tell job candidates if they ask us about Roche's offer?

Edgar Filing: ILLUMINA INC - Form DEFA14A

It's business as usual at Illumina and we remain fully focused on innovating and executing as we always have.
