Riverbed to Acquire OPNET Technologies, Inc.

Recently Riverbed Technology announced our intent to acquire OPNET, a market-leading provider of application performance management (APM) solutions.

Find out what this means for you.

Recently Riverbed Technology announced our intent to acquire OPNET, a market-leading provider of application performance management (APM) solutions. OPNET, a public company (NASDAQ: OPNT) headquartered in Bethesda, MD, has successfully built a broad APM solution offering that is recognized as a leader.

The addition of OPNET's broad-based family of APM products will enhance our already-strong Riverbed Cascade® solutions for network performance management (NPM) and builds upon Cascade's record growth in Q3. The combination of Cascade and OPNET will create a new force in the converged market for NPM and APM. This transaction also transforms Riverbed into a billion-dollar company for the first time.

OPNET's market-leading technology and products extend Cascade's business with deep application intelligence and allow us to offer a wider range of IT performance-management solutions. As our customers continue to adopt technologies like virtualization and Software Defined Networks (SDN), the line between applications and networks continues to blur. In other words, in today's world there is no such thing as an application without a network (or a network without an application)! That market convergence also means customers are relying more heavily than ever on their solution provider partners to offer them services to help them manage not just their network traffic, but their overall network performance, inclusive of both the network and the application.

This acquisition will give the Riverbed partner community the opportunity to grow their businesses by delivering a more comprehensive performance management offering to their customers that also drives incremental services revenue as part of the overall solution. Together, Riverbed and our Riverbed Partner Network provide customers a unique, integrated solution offering that accelerates our joint customers' IT infrastructures and keeps them performing their best.

We're excited to be able to offer our partners a broader family of solutions for solving network and application performance problems across all IT networks and infrastructures that no other company can match.

Keep on the look out for periodic updates as this acquisition progresses and more information on this new offering becomes available. Happy Selling, The Riverbed Channel Team
