MEDIX RESOURCES ANNOUNCES TECHNOLOGY PURCHASE

Technology Purchase Accomplishes Same Objective of Acquisition, and Terminates Letter of Intent to Purchase Serca Technologies

New York, NY -Medix Resources, Inc. [AMEX:MXR] today announced that it has contracted for the purchase of certain technologies intended to permit narrow band multicasting video conferencing over POTS lines. Based on this acquisition, Medix has terminated its previously executed letter of intent to purchase Serca Technologies. Medix, through its wholly owned HealthRamp subsidiary, provides Internet-based communication, data integration, and transaction processing technologies designed to provide access to safer and better healthcare at the point of care.

"We are enthusiastic about the potential development of multicasting video conferencing over plain old telephone service lines. This purchase provides us the opportunity to acquire this technology, which we believe could have many substantial applications. Our interest in Serca has always been on the potential for their technologies to enable a new form of video conferencing, with our focus being on applications in healthcare. In addition, Serca is pursuing the capability of moving data more broadly, through the use of multicasting, but that is less important to Medix at this time. A simpler transaction - a technology purchase - enables us to pursue the specific technology we desire, for less consideration, and without the normal complexities of company integration," stated Darryl Cohen, Medix CEO and President.

Medix, through its wholly owned HealthRamp subsidiary, provides Internet-based communication, data integration, and transaction processing designed to provide access to safer and better healthcare. Medix's products enable communication of high value-added healthcare information among physician offices, hospitals, health management organizations, and health insurance companies. Additional information about HealthRamp, and its products and services, can be found at www.HealthRamp.com.
