Re: Organizational Announcement

I am delighted to inform all of you that Dr. Claudine Simson will be joining the new LSI as Chief Technology Officer (CTO) as of March 26th, reporting to me. Claudine, a highly accomplished individual, brings with her a wealth of industry experience in the fields of telecommunications, networking and wireless, with expertise ranging from semiconductor process technology and design infrastructure to component design, as well as system-level applications. She recently held the CTO position at Motorola's Semiconductor Products Group and its spin-off, Freescale Semiconductor. Prior to joining Motorola, Claudine had a highly successful career for 23 years at Nortel Networks, where she held senior executive positions ranging from general manager of Nortel's semiconductor business to vice president in charge of all technology research spanning a product portfolio over $25 billion. She began her career as a device physicist at Bell-Northern Research Laboratories, and was recognized for launching the world's first single-chip filter-codec and the world's first high-performance optical networking module. Elected Fellow of the Royal Society of Canada (Academy of Science), Claudine is a recipient of three honorary doctorates and the National Order of Merit of France for the worldwide advancement of technology. She is also active on a number of boards of research institutions and high-technology companies, most notably Verigy, the recent spin-off of Agilent Technologies.

Edgar Filing: AGERE SYSTEMS INC - Form DEFA14A

As I mentioned in my first organizational announcement in January of this year, in today's highly competitive environment it is critical for our company to have a rich, vibrant and well thought out pipeline of technology and architectural ingredients that our product organizations can tap into as they architect and develop our future platforms and products. Well managed companies direct upward of 5-10% of their R&D budget toward these path finding efforts addressing future (3+ years) technology and architectural needs while also seeking out disruptive technologies that can enhance our competitive position and our business prospects. Claudine, with her team, will partner closely with the GM's, Strategic Planning, and Corporate Business Development to establish LSI's pipeline roadmap while coordinating much of this development activity internally as well as externally as we collaborate more deeply with universities, disruptive startup companies, as well as the CTO organizations of our largest customers.

You will hear much more in the coming weeks about Claudine and the CTO organization, its charter and scope. Please join me in welcoming Claudine to the new LSI!

I would also like to thank Rob Ober for stepping in and fulfilling the acting CTO role over the past 3 months at LSI.

Thanks,

Abhi
