Our company and First Citizens Bank and Trust Company, Inc. based in Columbia, S.C. (First Citizens Bank of South Carolina) have announced that we intend to merge later this year, pending regulatory and shareholder approvals.

We share with First Citizens of South Carolina a similar culture, values and business philosophies and a commitment to customers.

We believe that once we merge, the resulting First Citizens will be more efficient, have greater capacity to serve a broader spectrum of businesses and individuals, and will be able to offer more convenience and value.

First Citizens Bank of South Carolina has 176 branches. Most of them are in South Carolina, a market that we currently have no presence in.

Once the proposed merger is complete, the combined First Citizens will have more than 575 branches in 18 states and Washington, D.C.

Until systems conversion is complete — tentatively scheduled for early 2015 — customers should bank as they normally do at their existing branches. (Our customers can perform some transactions via First Citizens of South Carolina. For instance, they can use South Carolina's ATMs without paying a fee, and may cash checks or make deposits at South Carolina's branches in South Carolina. South Carolina's customers can cash checks or make deposits at our branches in North Carolina and use our ATMs across our footprint. That's been the case for a while and has nothing to do with the merger.)
