Item 2.06. Material Impairments.

On June 25, 2012, Coeur d'Alene Mines Corporation (the "Company" or "Coeur") announced that it had decided to evaluate strategic and operational alternatives for the Company's underground silver and gold mine located in Santa Cruz, Argentina (the "Martha Mine"), due to the Martha Mine's high operating costs and short remaining expected mine life. The Company expects to cease active mining operations at the Martha Mine by September 30, 2012, and to commence reclamation activities after mining operations have concluded.

On August 1, 2012, the Company's management determined to recognize an impairment charge of $4.8 million as of June 30, 2012 related to the Martha Mine. The Company estimates that $4.5 million of this amount will result in future cash expenditures.
