NEWS RELEASE

Cliffs Natural Resources Inc. Reduces Full-Year 2014 Capital Expenditures by an Additional $100 Million

Including Its Previous Capital Spending Decrease, Cliffs Expects Total Capital Expenditures to be Approximately 65% Lower Year Over Year

CLEVELAND - May 27, 2014 - Cliffs Natural Resources Inc. (NYSE: CLF) announced today that it is further reducing its expected full-year 2014 capital spending range by approximately 25%, or $100 million, to $275 million - $325 million. This significant reduction is in addition to the Company's previously announced capital spending decrease of approximately 55%, or $460 million, from Cliffs' full-year 2013 capital expenditures. The $100 million decrease will impact all of Cliffs' reporting segments, with Eastern Canadian Iron Ore and North American Coal making up 75% of the reduction.

Cliffs' President and CEO, Gary Halverson, said "Today's announcement reinforces our Board's and leadership team's focus on financial discipline. We continue to identify opportunities to significantly reduce our capital spending while maintaining our expected full-year volume and operating cost targets. Based on 30 years of experience in the highly cyclical mining sector, I believe these actions are appropriate during this volatile pricing environment. Our leadership team and all of our employees are focused on delivering the objectives we can control starting with safety, costs, production volume, and our customer relationships. We expect that this back-to-basics philosophy will generate more value from our current portfolio and, in so doing, will enhance long-term shareholder value."

The Company indicated that the lower full-year capital spending range of $275 million - $325 million is a sustainable level to support Cliffs' full-year production volume and cash cost expectations as well as safety and environmental obligations. The capital spending reduction is driven by the recent volatility in seaborne iron ore and metallurgical coal pricing. Cliffs indicated that it expects the pricing environment to remain volatile over the near term, which will directly impact the realized revenue in the majority of the Company's business segments. The long-term supply contracts in U.S. Iron Ore, Cliffs' largest and most profitable business segment, will significantly mitigate the impact of lower seaborne iron ore prices on consolidated revenues.

Since joining the Company in November 2013, CEO Gary Halverson has acted decisively to improve Cliffs' cost competitiveness by significantly reducing both capital and operating expenses. Cliffs expects to deliver approximately $650 million in cost and capital reductions in 2014 versus its 2013 results. This is driven by a year-over-year reduction of approximately $560 million in capital spending and $90 million in SG&A and exploration expenses, excluding severance and proxy contest-related costs. As previously disclosed, the Company also delivered $400 million in capital, SG&A and exploration cost savings in its full-year 2013 results versus 2012.
