Re : Confidential update on merger with Illumina
All,

I am writing to provide you with an update on the merger with Illumina. Many aspects of this are still in the process of being finalized, but I want you to have an initial view, with additional specifics to be provided in the days and weeks ahead. We will hold all-employee meetings in both Chesterford (3 pm Wednesday, UK time) and Hayward (4 pm Wednesday, Calif time) to discuss this in additional detail and answer questions you may have.

Motivation

Our reasons for combining remain the same today as when we first announced the plan back in November:

1. To rapidly ramp up field sales and customer support for the Solexa 1G Analyzer system. We expect that our field-based personnel will become part of the Illumina field organization immediately, and trainings are being planned for the Illumina team on our technology in the first weeks after the merger. Illumina sales people will begin to sell Solexa's system, coordinated with us, beginning right after the merger closes.
2. To compete more effectively in our market by becoming the only company to offer genome-scale technology for sequencing, genotyping and gene expression, the three cornerstones of modern genetic analysis. While a detailed strategy to fully unify these offerings will take some time and thought to develop properly, we are already seeing cases where customers want to use Solexa re-sequencing systems to discover SNPs and implement them on custom Illumina genotyping BeadArrays.
3. To leverage our combination of technologies for the development of even more powerful systems in the future, systems which will be difficult for competitors to match. Several meetings of R&D leads from Illumina and Solexa have been held, and it is clear from these that there are a lot of areas for mutual benefit in the very near term.

Timing and mechanics

Both companies need shareholder approval to complete the merger. These votes come to their conclusions this Friday at shareholder meetings to be held in Hayward and San Diego. In practice, we expect that almost all of the votes will have been cast in advance by proxy. While I do not want to prejudge the shareholders' decision, we are now very optimistic about a positive outcome. Assuming that outcome, the official completion of the legal aspect of combining the companies (the close) could happen later on Friday. If so, that would make Monday our first business day as a unified company. Based on the Illumina share price during the last few weeks, we now know that the share exchange ratio will be 0.344 Illumina shares per Solexa share. This represents a value of approximately $600 M for Solexa.

Forward looking statements include, but are not limited to, statements about the benefits of the transaction between Illumina and Solexa, including future financial and operating results, the combined company's plans, objectives, expectations and intentions and other statements that are not historical facts.

Among the important factors that could cause actual results to differ materially from those in any forward-looking statements are the ability to obtain regulatory approvals of the transaction on the proposed terms and schedule; the failure of Illumina or Solexa stockholders to approve the transaction; the failure of Illumina or Solexa to satisfy the other conditions to the transaction; the risk that the businesses will not be integrated successfully; the risk that the anticipated synergies and benefits from the transaction may not be fully realized or may take longer to realize than expected; disruption from the transaction making it more difficult to maintain relationships with customers, employees or suppliers; competition and its effect on pricing, spending, third-party relationships and revenues. Additional important factors that may affect future results are detailed in Illumina's and Solexa's filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC"), including their recent filings on Forms 10-K and 10-Q, or in information disclosed in public conference calls, the date and time of which are released beforehand.
