To HUGHES and PanAmSat Employees:

Today, EchoStar and HUGHES announced a plan for the merged company to deliver local broadcast channels in every one of the 210 television markets in the United States. This "Local Channels, All Americans" plan was developed by a team of EchoStar and DIRECTV engineers and is made possible only by combining all of our spectrum, all of our existing and planned satellites, and adding another spot-beam spacecraft.

Combined with "One Nation, One Rate Card" uniform pricing no matter where a consumer resides in the country, this initiative provides a positive "in the public's best interest" message that EchoStar, HUGHES and General Motors will actively promote in the coming weeks and months.

This development underscores the value of the combined company for consumers across the country. Not only will EchoStar-HUGHES be able to provide local channels in every market, our combined company will also have a satellite platform and subscriber base robust enough to provide affordable and accessible high-speed Internet services to virtually every home and business in the country.

Out of the gate, we are communicating today with Members of Congress, State Attorneys General, the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), the U.S. Federal Communications Commission (FCC), the media and our investors. We're also rolling our message out to customers, distributors and consumers.

Today's press release is attached, and you can see a detailed presentation, including nationwide and state-by-state maps on hughes.com.

I see today's announcement as proof of the great ideas and ingenuity of both HUGHES and EchoStar employees, and I look forward to even bigger ideas in the future!

Sincerely,

Jack
