TRI-CONTINENTAL MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION

Interview with Your Portfolio Managers, Jack Cunningham and Michael McGarry

What economic and market conditions affected Tri-Continental's portfolio during the first quarter of 2005?

The first quarter of 2005 was difficult for investors and most major indices posted negative returns. Less-defensive areas of the market, such as technology and telecommunications, suffered the most, while the energy sector, which benefited from higher oil and gas prices, was by far the best performer. Other defensive sectors within the S&P 500, such as utilities, consumer staples, and materials, also posted positive results.

The driving forces behind this generally negative market environment were sharply higher energy prices and rising interest rates. During the first quarter, oil prices soared to over $55 a barrel. At the same time, the US Federal Reserve Board continued to make "measured pace" increases in the federal funds rate, raising this rate twice by 25 basis points during the three-month period. Until this past quarter, longer-term rates had remained stable in spite of the Fed's moves. However, at the end of the first quarter, longer-term interest rates began to rise as well. The 10-year US Treasury bill began the year at 4.24% and ended the quarter 26 basis points higher, at 4.50% .

What can you tell us about Tri-Continental's portfolio strategy and investment results during the first quarter?

At the end of the first quarter, Tri-Continental's largest sector weighting was information technology, and Tri-Continental was overweighted in this area relative to the S&P 500 Index. Technology stocks delivered generally poor results for both Tri-Continental and the S&P 500, and Tri-Continental's heavy weighting in this sector negatively impacted both absolute and relative returns. While technology stock prices fell during the first quarter, we continue to believe that technology stock price valuations are attractive, and that fundamentals within the technology industry warrant a continued overweighting. Technology companies are showing strong balance sheets and many companies are holding large amounts of cash with very little debt. Some of these companies are putting their cash to work in stockholder-friendly ways, such as by instituting stock repurchase programs and by increasing dividends.

Tri-Continental's second-largest sector weighting at the end of the quarter was financials. This sector was negatively impacted by rising interest rates, and while Tri-Continental was underweighted in this area, the financial stocks in the portfolio underperformed those in the S&P 500. The financial sector thus had a negative impact on both absolute and relative returns for the quarter.

Tri-Continental Corporation

We did not expect the sharp upward movement of energy commodity prices in the first quarter, which we believe was driven primarily by market speculation and momentum, and not by supply fundamentals. As a consequence, Tri-Continental was underweighted in the energy sector relative to the S&P 500. While the outperformance of the energy sector did contribute positively to performance on an absolute basis, the area negatively impacted returns relative to the S&P 500 due to Tri-Continental's underweighting and the fact that the energy stocks in the portfolio underperformed the S&P 500's energy sector as a whole.

Consumer discretionary stocks delivered generally negative returns during the quarter. The sector was impacted by rising energy costs and rising interest rates, both of which could potentially curb consumer spending. Tri-Continental benefited from an underweighting in the group and from favorable stock selection relative to the S&P 500.

During the first quarter, Tri-Continental purchased put options and wrote call options on three energy stocks held by the portfolio. Put options provide the holder (in this case, Tri-Continental) with the right to sell securities at a specified price. Tri-Continental purchased these for downside protection in the event of falling energy prices. Call options obligate the seller (in this case, Tri-Continental) to sell stocks at a specified price. Tri-Continental partially offset the cost of the put options with the income generated by writing the call options. While this limited Tri-Continental's potential profit (because the portfolio was obligated to sell the stocks at certain price points), it also provided Tri-Continental with downside protection (because the portfolio could sell the stocks at predetermined prices). This two-part strategy (often referred to as a "collar") enabled the portfolio to maintain exposure to these stocks within a certain price band, while continuing to collect dividends.

What is your outlook?

While we believe the recent surge in energy prices is in part the result of market speculation, we are concerned that high oil prices could reduce the spending power of consumers and businesses, placing a drag on the economy. Higher interest rates also have the potential to slow spending. However, we believe that because inflation remains in check, it will not be necessary for the Federal Reserve Board to increase rates dramatically in the near term. On the plus side, corporate balance sheets and profits are strong, and inflation and interest rates remain historically low. We thus believe the market will be able to deliver moderate gains over the remainder of 2005.

Security Valuation - Securities (including options) traded on an exchange are valued at the last sales price on the primary exchange or market on which they are traded. Securities not listed on an exchange or security market, or securities for which there is no last sales price, are valued at the mean of the most recent bid and asked prices or are valued by J. & W. Seligman & Co. Incorporated (the "Manager") based on quotations provided by primary market makers in such securities. Securities for which market quotations are not readily available or are otherwise no longer valid or reliable are valued at fair value determined in accordance with procedures approved by the Board of Directors. This can occur in the event of, among other things, natural disasters, acts of terrorism, market disruptions, intra-day trading halts, and extreme market volatility. Short-term holdings that mature in more than 60 days are valued at current market quotations. Short-term holdings maturing in 60 days or less are valued at amortized cost.

Tri-Continental Corporation

Stockholder Services

Tri-Continental provides a number of services to make maintaining an investment in its Common Stock more convenient. Please consult Tri-Continental's prospectus for the terms and conditions of these services.

Automatic Dividend Investment and Cash Purchase Plan. Subject to the terms and conditions set forth in the prospectus, Stockholders may automatically purchase additional shares with dividends and capital gains. There is no charge for this service. Stockholders may also, subject to the terms and conditions of the prospectus, purchase additional shares directly from the Corporation. There is a service fee of a maximum of $2.00 for each cash purchase transaction.

Automatic Cash Withdrawal Plan. Stockholders who hold common shares with a market value of $5,000 or more may elect to receive a fixed amount from their investment at regular intervals by selling their shares to the Corporation.

Traditional Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Stockholders who have earned income and are under age 70 ¹/₂ may contribute up to $4,000 per year to a Traditional IRA for 2005. A working or non-working spouse may also contribute up to $4,000 to a separate Traditional IRA for 2005. Additionally, individuals who reach age 50 prior to the end of a taxable year may make "catch-up contributions" to a Traditional IRA of up to $500 (increasing to $1,000 for years beginning after 2005). Contributions to a Traditional IRA may be deductible or non-deductible. If you are single and not covered by an employer's retirement plan, your contribution will always be deductible. For individuals who are covered by a plan, contributions will be fully deductible if your modified adjusted gross income (MAGI) in 2005 is less than $50,000. For spouses who are both covered by a plan, contributions will be fully deductible if your MAGI is less than $70,000. If one spouse does not work or is not covered by a retirement plan, that spouse's contribution will be fully deductible provided your household MAGI does not exceed $150,000. If your contribution is not deductible, you may still take advantage of the tax-deferred accumulation of earnings in your Traditional IRA.

Rollover IRA. You may be eligible to roll over a distribution of assets received from another IRA, a qualified employee benefit plan, or tax-deferred annuity into a Rollover IRA with Tri-Continental. To avoid a tax penalty, the transfer to a Rollover IRA must occur within 60 days of receipt of the qualifying distribution. If you do not make a direct transfer of a distribution from a qualified employee benefit plan or a tax-deferred annuity to a Rollover IRA, the payor of the distribution must withhold 20% of the distribution.

Roth IRA. You (and a working or non-working spouse) may each make an after-tax contribution of up to $4,000 per year to a Roth IRA provided you have earned income and meet the eligibility requirements. Your MAGI must be less than $95,000 (individuals) or $150,000 (married couples) to be eligible to make a full contribution to a Roth IRA. You are eligible to make a partial Roth IRA contribution if your MAGI is below $110,000 (individuals) or $160,000 (married couples). Total combined contributions to a Roth IRA and a Traditional IRA cannot exceed $4,000 in any year. Additionally, individuals who reach age 50 prior to the end of a taxable year may make "catch-up contributions" to either a Roth IRA or Traditional IRA of up to $500 (increasing to $1,000 for years beginning after 2005). Earnings grow tax-free and will be distributed to you tax-free and penalty-free provided that you hold your account for at least five years and you take the distribution either after age 59 ¹/₂, for disability, upon death, or to make a first-time home purchase (up to $10,000). a Traditional IRA, you may contribute to a Roth IRA even if you are over age 70¹/₂ (if you have earned income), and you are not required to take minimum distributions at age 70¹/₂. You may convert an existing Traditional IRA to a Roth IRA to take advantage of tax-free distributions. You must pay taxes on any earnings and deductible contributions in your Traditional IRA when converting it to a Roth IRA. Talk to your financial advisor for more details on converting your Traditional IRA.

Retirement Planning Qualified Plans Unincorporated businesses and the self-employed may take advantage of the same benefits in their retirement plans that are available to corporations. Contribution levels can go as high as 100% of earned income (reduced by plan contributions), to a maximum of $42,000 per participant. For retirement plan purposes, no more than $210,000 may be taken into account as earned income under the plan in 2005. Social Security integration and employee vesting schedules are also available as options in the Tri-Continental prototype retirement plans. Although you already may be participating in an employer's retirement plan, you may be eligible to establish another plan based upon income from other sources, such as director's fees.

Retirement Plan Services provides information about our prototype retirement plans. The toll-free telephone number is (800) 445-1777 in the US and (212) 682-7600 outside the US.

Gifts Free of Federal Tax are often made using Tri-Continental Common Stock. You may give as much as $11,000 a year to as many individuals as desired free of federal gift tax, and a married couple may give up to $22,000 a year.

Stock Repurchase Program. On November 18, 2004, the Board of Directors authorized the renewal of Tri-Continental's ongoing share repurchase program. The program authorizes the Corporation to repurchase up to 5.6% of the Corporation's shares during the period from renewal through December 31, 2005, provided that the discount of a share's market price to its net asset value (NAV) remains greater than 10%. The stock repurchase plan seeks, among other things, to moderate the growth in the number of shares outstanding, increase the net asset value of outstanding shares, increase the liquidity of Tri-Continental's common stock, and reduce the dilutive impact on Stockholders who do not take capital gains distributions, when such distributions are made, in additional shares.

Between November 18, 2004 and March 31, 2005, 2.0 million shares were repurchased. This is approximately 1.7% of the shares outstanding at the beginning of the period. The repurchase of additional shares is expected to continue through December 31, 2005, as long as the discount remains above 10%.
